I am sad and surprised. How can this happen to me? The Parker pen had been with me ever since grandma had gifted it to me on my 10th birthday. I wrote all my exams, letters and notes with that dear pen. It was a blue pen with silver tip. It was an entirely different experience to write with it.

Over a hundred times I got its refills changed. It was my lucky charm, my mother used to say. Yes, it was, for, I used to score high marks whenever I used to write my exams with it. Once or twice I used Gel pens to write my exams but all those exams were terrible failures.

I can't believe that I lost my grandma's pen. How is that possible! Tomorrow I will reach school early and search for it in the class and the computer lab. Well, I hope and pray that I will find it tomorrow.

For the first time I feel proud of myself. I can't still believe that I did such a brave act that heroes do in movies or soldiers do on rare occasions. The child I rescued was less than half of my age but I still can't understand how he happened to cross the road without anyone to accompany him. When I was crossing the road, I suddenly saw a small child rushing to the road from the park without noticing the traffic signal. When I think of it now, I can't imagine that situation when I ran to catch hold of the child who was about to meet with an accident. From this I learnt one truth – there is nothing impossible if we conquer our fear, though risk is involved.
